

writing, may more and more find the kinetics of experience disclosed—the kinetics of themselves as persons as well as of the stuff they have to work on, and by.

LANGUAGES AND LITERATURE

INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF LANGUAGE

Flola L. Shepard

The use of language; the problem of meaning; the development of language, especially the English language. Elementary work in phonetic semantic change and in comparative syntax; dialect and cultural borrowing. Exercises in straight thinking and clear writing, in collecting and organizing research materials, are used as needed.

INTRODUCTION TO STUDY IN FRENCH OR GERMAN OR SPANISH

Flola L. Shepard

For a group of at least eight students who have had no experience or an unsatisfying experience in learning a foreign language.

ADVANCED FRENCH, GERMAN OR SPANISH

Flola L. Shepard

Syntax and composition; literature; cultural history. As arranged by teacher and student.

HEBREW

Hilda Morley

Introduction to a basic knowledge of Hebrew, with emphasis on modern forms in use today. Tutorials will be arranged for those who have already covered the ground of the Introduction, above.

ENGLISH LITERATURE OF THE 19TH CENTURY

Hilda Morley

A study of style and development in 19th century English prose, both fiction and non-fiction, beginning with the letters of the romantic poets, dealing with the prose of the major Victorian novelists and critics and concluding with an examination of the style of Henry James.

A STUDY OF THE 17TH CENTURY "METAPHYSICALS"

Hilda Morley

A study of the "metaphysical" school in prose and poetry, concentrating on Donne's development and that of his followers in poetry and on the prose of Thomas Browne, Robert Burton, Jeremy Taylor and Donne himself.

SOCIAL SCIENCES AND THE HUMANITIES

HISTORY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE

Flola L. Shepard

A study of the development of language in its relation to the political, social and cultural history of the nation.

PROBLEMS IN LINGUISTICS

Flola L. Shepard

For advanced students.